

FORMER FEDERAL JUDGE SEAN J. MCLAUGHLIN RETURNS TO KNOX LAW

Hon. Sean J. McLaughlin (ret.) has returned to Knox Law, where he will focus his practice on alternative dispute resolution, including mediation, arbitration and early neutral evaluation in both federal and state courts.

He brings nearly 40 years of diverse experience to his new role, including 19 years as a United States District Court judge and five years as general counsel of Erie Insurance Group, a Fortune 500 company. He had 13 years of private litigation practice at Knox Law, during which time he concentrated in civil litigation, including both insurance defense and plaintiff matters. The breadth and depth of his experience lends him a unique perspective on the resolution of legal disputes.

Judge McLaughlin served on the bench of the Western District of Pennsylvania from 1994 through 2013, completing his tenure as chief judge. During that time, he presided over 5,399 civil cases and 186 jury trials. His contributions to the federal court system included service on the United States Judicial Conference Committee on Court Administration and Case Management by appointment of Chief Justice John G. Roberts, Jr.

Knox Law's team of nearly 40 attorneys have been providing quality legal services to businesses, governmental entities, nonprofit organizations, insurance companies, financial institutions, individuals and families for 60 years.
